Pike, Oscar Arroyo, nest Miltenberger, M. Hanley, Harw J. Phelps, Wm. Ball, J. B. Corku and Henry Dennis. The proceson extended more than twenty rares, and altogether contained about five thousand persons. For obvious reasons the funeral cortege proseded quietly, without pomp, incident or display of any kind. It was stirred by no appeals to its passions, and was moved simply by a generous sympathy for a leader upon whom, in a strange land, the "dark Plutonean shadows" had been gathered. The remains of the beloved Allen were deposited in a vault at the Washington

There is probably not another physician in the country who has had greater experience in the treatment, or contributed more to the literature of these diseases, and the evidences of his success in of the Poor. New York, and other cities to which he has paid professional visits, are many and of the most flattering description. There are thousands in our midst under the ban of this treacherous disease, wending their way slowly but certainly to a consumptive's grave, and to whom the popular ignorance of the causes and early spmptoms of this se will prove most fatal. To such Dr. Hanter's letter will be interesting and in-slowly consumed away. When the study o pathological anatomy-that is to say, the disease of the lungs was more frequently the cause of wasting than all other chronic diseases combined, and hence from this time consumption of the lungs attracted more attention, and in the course of time, the application of the term was limited to pelmonary disease alone. When, therefore, I use the term consumption, I wish the reader to remember that I mean not only a disease of the lungs, but a particular kind of disease, characterized by the deposition of tubercles in their substance TUBERCLES are little granular bodies de quently located beneath the mucous memface of the mucous membrane. When they found in three different stages. In the first, they are grayish, half-transparent, and feel firm and rough when the finger is passed common pea, and are known in medical par-lance by the name of miliary tubercles. In this stage they cause very little disturbance of the system. All we ordinarily find is. that the breathing is slightly shortened, and Edgar W Blanchard, a minor of Harrison perhaps there is a disposition to hack and clear the throat frequently, but beyond of what is going on in the lungs.

Second Stage.—The miliary tubercles crease in size by the accretion of fresh particles thrown off from time to time by blood, and also undergo a change in color. vellow. If we cut through a portion of the exist, we find it studded here and there with what looks precisely like lumps of cheese. You can separate these, and they break down between the fingers just like bits ness of breath by closing the air-tubes and cells of the part of the lung in which they are situated. There may also be cough and Third Stage.-Having reached the stage of remain stationary for weeks, months, or even part of the lung diseased. The matter or tened tubercle, is poured out into the brouthe same time, but in successive crops, so softening does not take place in all at the ame time. After the first shock to the sysem caused by the ulceration and break lown of a part of the lungs has pas he is getting well; but soon a second crop of tubercles softens, and then part of the lung breaks down. This successive softening, followed by temporary amendment, slowly but surely undermines the strength of the system. As soon as the first softening of the tubercle takes place, we have all the worst symptoms inaugurated—hetic fever, night sweats, increase of cough, profuse purulent expectoration, loss of flesh and strength, etc. Such is a brief outline of what takes place in the lungs in the three stages of Consumption. Before death takes place, a considerable portion of one lung becomes destroyed, and usually the other affected. Sometimes several distinct cavities exist in the same lung, but it is more common for the intervening tissues to become obliterated, and the several small cavities to unite and form one large excavation. one large excavation.
